

Introduction

The statistics presented in this chapter include data on the different presidential terms of the Islamic Republic of Iran, the number of eligible voters, and the number of actual voters in various rounds of presidential, Islamic Consultative Assembly, and Islamic City and Village Councils elections, as well as information on foreign diplomatic missions in Iran. The initial political statistics, collected since the year 1348, originated from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Institute for Social Studies and Research, the National Consultative Assembly, and the Ministry of the Interior. These statistics covered government diplomatic missions in various countries, the number of valid treaties Iran had with other governments, and the number of members of the National Consultative Assembly. This data was subsequently included in the Iran Statistical Yearbook. The dissemination of this information continued in the Statistical Yearbook until the year 1357.

Following the victory of the Islamic Revolution in the year 1357, data related to the diplomatic missions of the Islamic Republic of Iran in various countries, foreign diplomatic missions in Iran, international organizations in which Iran held membership, a list of approved legislations by the Islamic Consultative Assembly, and a list of unapproved bills and plans in the Assembly, among other items, were collected. This information was included and published in the national statistical yearbooks until the year 1362. Subsequently, through dedicated efforts, information pertaining to political affairs began to be published in a focused manner within a separate chapter of the Yearbook. The statistics in this chapter were collected from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of the Interior and have appeared in the Statistical Yearbook since the year 1387.

Concepts and definitions

Diplomatic missions of the Islamic Republic of Iran: This refers to the embassies, consulates general, and (permanent) missions of the Islamic Republic of Iran to international organizations, as well as the offices for the protection of Iran's interests in foreign countries.

Embassy: A permanent diplomatic mission or embassy refers to a unit of the diplomatic institution (Ministry of Foreign Affairs) that is permanent or unlimited in terms of duration. It has its own head, components, equipped facilities, furnishings and property, archives, and vehicles.

Consulate General: This is a consular post headed by a consul general, established in a major city other than the capital, which provides all consular services in their complete form.

Accredited or Non-resident Ambassador: This means that the head of any of the three diplomatic classes, or one of the diplomatic staff, performs their duties in the receiving state without being officially resident in that country; in fact, their place of residence is another country.

Ambassador: He/she is the head of the diplomatic mission who is accredited by the President to the receiving state.

Roving Ambassador: This refers to heads of diplomatic missions from foreign countries whose accreditation is to the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran, but who are non-resident. They perform their diplomatic mission duties in the Islamic Republic of Iran and travel to the Islamic Republic of Iran temporarily as needed or in accordance with relevant programs within the scope of their duties.

Office for the Protection of Foreign Interests:

According to Article 46 of the 1961 Vienna Convention, a mission, in addition to carrying out its duties on behalf of its sending state, may also undertake the protection of the interests of a third state in the receiving state. This applies if diplomatic relations have not yet been established between the two countries, or if diplomatic relations between them are permanently or temporarily suspended or severed for various reasons. In such cases, one or both parties, with the consent of the other, can entrust the protection of their interests to a third country with which they have friendly relations. The third state then establishes an interest section (or office for the protection of interests) to safeguard the interests of the sending state.

In these cases, the parties or one party, with the consent of the other party, can entrust the protection of its interests to a third country with which both have friendly relations. The third state then establishes an office for the protection of interests to safeguard the interests of the sending state.

Honorary consulates: In certain instances, due to geographical distance or the absence of an embassy or consulate general in a country, an honorary consulate is established to facilitate convenient access for clients and to save time and costs for nationals. It acts as a liaison between the embassy or consulate general and the country's nationals to coordinate consular affairs.

Selected information

From the year 1358 to the year 1402, thirteen rounds of presidential elections have been held in the Islamic Republic of Iran. In the thirteenth presidential election, the public participation rate was over 49 percent.

The Islamic Consultative Assembly comprises 290 members in its twelfth term, of whom 277 are male and 13 are female. In the sixth round of elections for the Islamic City and Village Councils, 127,829 people were elected, with 121,349 being male and 6,480 female.

In the year 1402, among the countries worldwide, 156 countries had diplomatic missions in Iran (stationed in Tehran). Of these, 8 countries, in addition to Tehran, also had offices for a consulate general, honorary consulate, or interest section in other cities.

1. The diplomatic missions of the countries located in cities other than Tehran are titled as consulate general or honorary consulate.

2.Regarding the UN's geographical classification known as Geoscheme, countries like Armenia, Azerbaijan, Cyprus, and Georgia are geographically located in Asia. However, concerning the current chapter's focus on political affairs, and as recommended by the relevant authoritative body, it's more appropriate for the categorization of transcontinental countries (or those located on the border of the Asian and European continents) to prioritize their political groupings. For this reason, these countries have been placed within the group of European countries.
